Dear Mark Williamson,

As you may know, NameBargain.com is a division of register.com, an ICANN-accredited registrar. Register.com is required by law to create and maintain a publicly available record for each domain name registered through its service. This "WHOIS" record contains all of the contact information (not including credit card information) that you listed when you first registered your domain name(s).

ICANN also requires register.com to make your information available to third parties who enter into a bulk WHOIS "data access" agreement with register.com. Register.com, however, is not required to include your information in the bulk WHOIS data file if you "opt-out" of having this information included. As such, register.com is preparing a bulk WHOIS data file for distribution that contains only the information of individuals who choose to be included.

We are sending you this message in an effort to protect the privacy of your personal data. Register.com recommends that you choose not to include your WHOIS information in the bulk WHOIS data file. If register.com does not receive a response from you in regard to this issue, we will automatically exclude your contact information from the WHOIS data file it makes available to third parties. To provide a response different from what is selected in the check box below, please click the following link

Please choose only one (1) of the following:

I choose not to include my personal data in the bulk WHOIS data file that will be licensed by register.com to third parties.

I choose to include my personal data in the bulk WHOIS data file that will be licensed to third parties. [Please note that, in accordance with ICANN regulations, you must select this option if your domain name is registered to an organization or any other business entity.]

Please note that if you choose to exclude your personal data from the bulk WHOIS data file, your personal data will nevertheless continue to appear in our WHOIS database, which is publicly accessible via our web site.

If you have further questions about NameBargain.com's privacy policy or WHOIS database, please submit a ticket to a NameBargain.com Customer Support Representative by clicking the link below.
